

25 THINGS TO DO IN SEATTLE THIS FALL

September 14, 2017 | In Seattle | By Nick Bentley

The senses awake the minute fall comes to town. That telltale coniferous whiff of pine sap mixed with the sound of crunchy, golden maple leaves underfoot. After a record-setting summer, fall is certainly a welcome turn of season. In Seattle, the cooler temperatures offer an excuse to get cozy indoors, fill up on hearty food and drinks and explore the city's shopping opportunities. Our shortlist of 25 things to do in Seattle this fall has all these activities and more to kick start your autumn adventures!

14. Smith Tower

Once the tallest building in Seattle, the Smith Tower now boasts a newly redesigned Observatory featuring a prohibition-style bar, in addition to its historic interior (and original brass elevators!).

See all the way to the Seattle waterfront from the Smith Tower. Credit: David Lee