

3 Places to Try in Seattle This Weekend

Eater's picks for places to eat and drink

By Megan Hill · @MeganHillWriter · Sep 23, 2016, 12:30p

Kizuki Ramen/FB

Welcome back to Eater Seattle's Something for the Weekend column. Every Friday, you probably ask the same question: Where should I eat and drink this weekend? Covering brunch, dinner, and everything in between, here, now, three places to try.

SMITH TOWER

Get up to Smith Tower's new Observatory, whether you've been in the past or have yet to visit. The rebranded, refreshed 35th-floor space is a must for the views, the history, and now, the food and drink, which present a mash-up of the tower's Prohibition-era and Asian influences. Raw oysters, Chinese dumplings, and bahn mi sandwiches are among the offerings, as are beer, cider, sake, shochu, and a collection of thematically-appropriate cocktails.